Situation

Weather: Agadir features a subtropical-semiarid climate with warm summers and mild winters. Located along the Atlantic Ocean, Agadir has a very temperate climate. The daytime temperature generally stays in the 20s °C (70s °F) every day, with the winter highs typically reaching 20.4 °C (70 °F) in December-January (see weather-table below).

Month	Oct	Year
Average high, °C (°F)	25.3 (77.5)	23.4 (74.1)
Daily mean, °C (°F)	20.3 (68.5)	18.4 (65.1)
Average low, °C (°F)	15.2 (59.4)	13.4 (56.1)
Average precipitation, mm (inches)	25.8 (1.016)	291.9 (11.492)
Average precipitation days	4.1	39.4

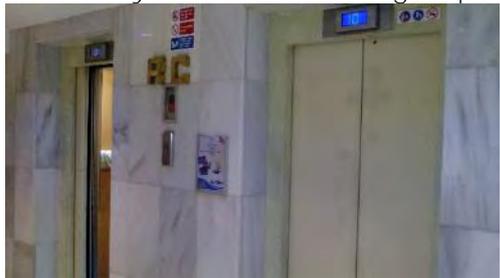

History: History is virtually silent on Agadir before the 12th century. In the 2nd century AD, the historian Polybius referred to North Africa on the Atlantic, a place called cap Rhysaddir, that may have been located near Agadir but its location is still under debate. The oldest cartographic mention of Agadir is on a map from 1325: at the approximate location of the modern city there was an indication of a place called Porto Mesegina, after the name of a Berber tribe already mentioned in the 12th century, the Mesquina, that is to say the Ksima. At the end of the medieval period, Agadir was a town of some notoriety. The name itself, Agadir el-arba, was attested to for the first time in 1510. By 1960, Agadir numbered over 40,000 residents when at 15 minutes to midnight on 29 February 1960, it was again almost totally destroyed by an earthquake of magnitude 5.7 on the Richter scale that lasted 15 seconds, burying the city and killing more than a third of the population. But today with its white buildings, wide flowered boulevards, modern hotels and European style cafes, Agadir is not a typical city of traditional Morocco but it is a modern, active and dynamic city, turned towards the future.
